

THE STUPPY PROCESS

Our People & Our Process Make A Difference – To You.

At Stuppy Greenhouse, we offer customers more than structures and systems, materials and manufacturing. We offer you a partnership that will result in a design that truly fits your needs, equipment and systems, chosen for your crops and conditions, and a process that is both customer- and construction-friendly. Here's how:

DEFINE IT – This is our discovery phase, where we get to know your business, your budget, your expectations, and your desired results. In this step we work with you to accurately define the following:

- Business requirements and project objectives
- Design and engineering requirements
- Construction plans
- Project management needs
- Schedule
- Financial terms and conditions

DESIGN IT – Once we agree to a design concept and cost proposal, the real work begins. This is when we fine-tune and finalize all design details, begin engineering the structure, confirm materials, components and coverings as well as heating, cooling, and environmental controls. We work with contractors to coordinate their equipment in the greenhouse. And our own internal teams work together to review and refine all the details of your project. During the design step we accomplish the following:

- Structural engineering
- Greenhouse systems coordination and integration
- Mechanical and electrical coordination
- Final specifications for equipment and verification
- Final construction drawings
- Final proposal with schedule

DO IT – Now there is a clear plan to execute! After a final project review and approval by your team, your greenhouse will start to take shape. This step includes:

- Manufacturing & materials procurement
- Construction (with builder checkpoints)
- Testing and commissioning
- Owner training
- Final approval

CONTINUED SUPPORT – After the project is complete, we continue to support your greenhouse with warranties, maintenance training, parts, and technical support, ensuring your success.
